YOU DID NOT OR COULD NOT GET TESTED

CONSIDER GETTING TESTED. Quarantine and wait at least 6-8 days before you test in order to avoid a possible false negative result. Keep in mind that when testing is in high demand, your results may be delayed by several days.

After your quarantine or isolation is over, you can resume normal activities. But don't forget to wear a mask!

*Think an exposure has done before they started having symptoms and at least 10 days after they started having symptoms. People who live in separate and considered independent housing from two days before they got tested, through at least 10 days.

Symptoms may include fever or chills, cough, loss of taste or smell, difficulty breathing, sore throat, headache, sore throat, and other symptoms.

A false negative test result is when the test result is negative when you actually are infected with COVID-19. This may happen when you test too soon after your exposure, and there is not enough virus in your body to be detected. And a potential false negative by testing approximately 6-8 days from when you were first exposed before you get tested.

This document provides general information related to exposure to the COVID-19 virus. It is not medical advice and does not substitute for the advice of your physician or other health care professional. Consulting your personal physician is recommended when faced with health issues to obtain specific medical advice taking into consideration your medical condition.
